- 2 (a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following find-3 ings:
- 4 (1) Pursuant to the Telecommunications Act of 5 1996 (Public Law 104–104), the Federal Commu-6 nications Commission eliminated national ownership 7 rules, and revised local ownership rules, for radio 8 broadcast stations.
 - (2) This deregulation of ownership rules has materially altered the radio broadcast industry and resulted in a concentration of ownership of radio stations and a corresponding reduction in localism. The number of radio station owners decreased from 5,100 in 1996 to 3,800 in 2001, a decrease of 25 percent.
 - (3) Segments of the radio, concert, and concert promotion industries have also become vertically integrated. In some cases, radio station owners, and concert promoters have common ownership, as well as exclusive agreements to manage concert venues. As a result, these radio station owners have the incentive and ability to favor the musical artists and groups they promote.
 - (4) This could make it more difficult for nonaffiliated concert promoters to secure air time, for nonaffiliated musical artists or groups to secure air

- time, and for nonaffiliated radio stations to secure access to musical artists or groups.
 - (5) According to a number of recent studies, in the rapid consolidation of the radio, concert promotion, and concert venue industries in the 5-year period following the enactment of the Telecommunications Act of 1996, concert ticket prices have increased by more than 50 percent more than such prices had increased in any previous 5 year-period.
 - (6) According to some estimates, from 1991 to 1996, the average concert ticket price increased by approximately 21 percent, compared to an increase in the Consumer Price Index of about 15 percent. From 1996 to 2001, the average concert ticket price increased by more than 61 percent, while the Consumer Price Index increased by 13 percent.
 - (7) There is a substantial public interest in promoting the values embraced by the first amendment to the Constitution, and the public interest, convenience, and necessity, by increasing the presence of independently-owned and locally-produced content on radio.
 - (8) There is a substantial public interest in promoting the value embraced by the first amendment

- to the Constitution by strengthening the diversity of voices provided through media such as radio.
 - (9) Pursuant to its authority and responsibility to protect the public interest under the Communications Act of 1934, the Commission has sought to promote diversity and competition in radio broadcasting.
 - (10) The promotion of independently-owned and locally-produced content in radio not only addresses the primary objective of the Commission to guarantee adherence to the first amendment to the Constitution, it also increases competition of audio in the provision of audio programming, in radio advertising, and in concert venue and concert promotion.
 - (11) The concentration of ownership of radio stations and a corresponding reduction in localism following the enactment of the Telecommunications Act of 1996 has exceeded that intended by Congress in enacting that Act.
 - (12) In 1995, the top 50 radio groups owned 8.6 percent of the total number of radio stations. By 2000 they owned 27.5 percent of the total number of radio stations.
 - (13) In 1995, the top 50 radio groups accounted for 43.6 percent of the total revenues going

- to all radio stations. By 2000 that percentage had increased to 62.5 percent.
 - (14) The top 10 groups account for almost 50 percent of all radio station industry revenues, while owning 17.6 percent of all commercial radio stations.
 - (15) This consolidation has also caused some radio station groups to collect alternative sources of income, including establishing exclusive agreements with independent promoters, establishing fees for play list monitoring, and limiting radio promotion of concert tours to musical artists and groups playing at venues owned by such groups.
 - (16) These practices, when coupled with the increased concentration of the ownership of radio stations, have the potential to reduce the diversity of music and other material made available to the American public over radio as stations make programming decisions for reasons other than the licensee's bona fide determination whether the material serves the public interest.
 - (17) Current Commission rules prohibiting payola predate the enactment of the Telecommunications Act of 1996, and the evolution of new promotional practices, and do not directly address the applicability of sections 317 and 507 of the Commu- nications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 317, 508) to such new promotional practices. As a result, radio stations engaging in such practices do not make any sponsorship identification announcements in connection with the broadcast of material which are the subject of such practices.

 - (18) These types of practices are inconsistent with the public interest and with the policies enunciated in sections 317 and 507 of the Communications Act of 1934. In order to assure compliance with these sections, the Commission should revise its rules implementing those sections to prohibit these practices and to facilitate the broadcast of diverse radio programs while assuring that legitimate promotional activities can continue.
 - (19) Promotion of the values embraced by the first amendment to the Constitution, and the strengthening of a diversity of voices provided through media, such as radio, is in the public interest.
 - (20) A broader diversity of voices through media sources such as radio promotes the right of the people under the first amendment to the Constitution to receive a wide range of information.

1	(b) Purpose.—The purpose of this Act is to promote
2	the values embraced by the first amendment to the Con-
